If coming by car, it is best to park at the Kreuzeck-/Alpspitzbahn car park and take the Bayerischen Zugspitzbahn rack and pinion railway for one stop to Hammersbach station. The tour leads from there along the banks of the Hammersbach, a tributary river of the Loisach, for around one hour until you reach the entrance to the Höllental Gorge. The trail through the natural gorge begins here, leading through a rock tunnel, footbridges and rocky steps. In about 45 minutes, you will reach the end of the gorge at 1,200 metres above sea level. The Höllental Valley opens up here and offers views of the Höllental Glacier, as well as the Zugspitz Peak. The trail branches off to the left at the Höllentalanger Hut and a winding trail leads steeply uphill, past the Knappenhäusern and on to Hupfleitenjoch. A last look in the direction of the Zugspitze before embarking on the final 300 metres in altitude to Osterfelderkopf Peak at 2,050 metres. The top station of the Alpspitzbahn cable car awaits just below the peak, which your knees will thank you for using to make the descent back down to your original starting point. Tip: You will be rewarded with fabulous views of your walk from the AlpSpIX Viewing Platform.
